 - Screening for adverse childhood experiences (ACEs): Cautions and suggestions: <http://www.unh.edu/ccrc/pdf/CV350-InPress.pdf> - It raises a number of important considerations when exploring use of ACEs questionnaire for screening in health care settings.
 - David Finkelhor, PhD is the Director of the Crimes against Children Research Center, Co-Director of the Family Research Laboratory, and Professor of Sociology at the University of New Hampshire. He is a leader in the field of child maltreatment and has authored more than 150 books and journal articles on the topic.

- While a screening test in and of itself is not usually considered an intervention, an effective screening program is crucially connected to specific interventions. The following empirically-supported interventions for primary and secondary prevention of child abuse and neglect (the links connects you the program summaries on the California Evidence-Based Clearinghouse for Child Welfare). Familiarity with these programs will enrich discussions about the full spectrum of existing interventions, and might help explore which interventions fit within the scope and direction of this work:
